Summary: A poem from Simon Snow's point of view. It's set before Baz appears in the story, when Simon is paranoid about him not being there.

Can't get you out of my head!

I can't get you out of my head

I'm uncomfortable with your empty bed

I can't get you out of my mind

Now I can't follow your sneaking from behind

I can't get you out of my brain

This must be another trick you're playing

I can't get you out of my dreams

You fill all of them it seems

I can't get you out of my head

Even though I know you want me dead

And your presence fills me with dread

But I want you here at school where I can see you.

End
file.
